

Austrian Pavilion at the 2016 Venice Biennale

By Caramel 20-07-2016 Popularity:14 0 Comments

For the Architecture Biennale in Venice, Caramel's task was to design the 'refugee camp', using a vacant office building in Vienna.

Safeguarding privacy, as in marking a place where someone can rest undisturbed by external influences was, for Caramel, the first and most important subject of their "intervention". Rather than posing a limitation, the time limit became a constructive part of their thought process. Starting with a minimal design repertoire, Caramel first developed elements for dividing up the space and then creating some privacy in the former open-plan offices. This simple formal language was extended to the design of the communal areas. A central criterion of Caramel architects' design is that all elements can be rapidly dismantled and easily reassembled in a different location.
